G-maj13 arpeggio... complete arpeggio

The image contains two musical exercises. The first exercise, titled 'G-maj13 arpeggio... complete arpeggio', is written for guitar. It consists of two measures. The first measure shows an arpeggio starting on G4 (9th fret, low E string) and ascending through the 13th fret to G5 (13th fret, high E string), then descending. The notes are labeled with chord tones: 1, b3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, and 1 etc... The second measure shows the same arpeggio starting on G5 and descending. Below the staff, fingerings are indicated: 2, sl, 4, 3, 1, 4, 4, 2 for the first measure and 4, 4, 1, 3, 4, sl, 2 for the second. The second exercise, titled 'Top 4 string set arpeggio from Gmm', also consists of two measures. The first measure shows an arpeggio starting on G4 (7th fret, low E string) and ascending through the 11th fret to G5 (11th fret, high E string), then descending. The notes are labeled with chord tones: 7, 1, b3, 5, 7, 9. The second measure shows the same arpeggio starting on G5 and descending. Below the staff, fingerings are indicated: 3, 4, 2, 2, 1, 4 for the first measure and 3, 4, 3, 3, 1, 4 for the second. The title 'same arpeggio up diatonic min3rd' is written above the second measure of the second exercise.

This is just one exercises ... G-ma7 or G melodic minor.

- Play 2 octaves of scale in position
- then two octaves of triads
- two octaves of 7th chords
- two octaves of 9th chords
- two octaves of 13th or complete arpeggio

The last two bars are just playing 4 string arpeggio and going up min 3rd diatonically like going from Minor to relative Major.

I like to use string sets, usually 4 strings, top 4 or middle 4 and use the arpeggios from those string sets to develop solo ideas....

I only notated out starting on 1st degree of MM. That's only 1 version. you should do this with each scale degree. (and I hope you already have this taken care of with Maj. The time spent notating it out along with somewhat mechanically memorizing... will really help the material become instinctive.

What the string set arpeggios become is filler material to the target notes. Solos are generally target notes with reference to a chord. And filler material between the target notes. There is obviously organization for which target notes to which chords, Which of course is very creative, artistic even mystical etc...
